Description of Project

The description of project is the only demonstration evaluators have of the substance and quality of the project and its contribution to its own field and scholarship more broadly. Accordingly, the description must include details about the ideas, objectives, and methods of the project. Assertions of need or merit are not helpful.

The project description must not exceed 200 words using a 12-point typeface. The description of the project should address the basic ideas, problems, works, or questions the study will examine. Attach a brief budget detailing the costs of travel, books, photography, or other necessary materials.
