

Sponsored by the Political Theory Workshop with generous support from the UCONN Humanities Institute

"REPUBLICANISM AND THE RULE OF LAW"

RICHARD DAGGER, UNIVERSITY OF RICHMOND

DABNEY WARING, PHD STUDENT,
POLITICAL SCIENCE, AS DISCUSSANT

MARCH 5TH, 12:15-1:30P.M. ON ZOOM

---

PRE-CIRCULATED PAPER AND MEETING LINK TO FOLLOW
QUESTIONS? EMAIL JANE.GORDON@UCONN.EDU

Richard Dagger is the E. Claiborne Robins Distinguished Chair in the Liberal Arts at the University of Richmond, where he holds a joint appointment in Political Science and in the Philosophy, Politics, Economics, and Law Program. Professor Dagger's publications include numerous essays in political and legal philosophy, with special attention to political obligation, the justification of punishment, and republicanism. The first two interests are reflected in his Playing Fair: Political Obligation and the Problems of Punishment (Oxford University Press, 2018). The interest in republicanism is central to his Civic Virtues: Rights, Citizenship, and Republican Liberalism (Oxford University Press, 1997), which won the Elaine and David Spitz Prize of the Conference for the Study of Political Thought in 1999. He is also co-author of a textbook, Political Ideologies and the Democratic Ideal (Routledge, 11th edition), and co-editor of a companion book of readings, Ideals and Ideologies: A Reader (Routledge, 11th edition).